

SENATOR HEYBURN DEAD

Succumbs to Lingular Illness in Washington.

NINE YEARS IN U. S. SENATE

Hard Fight Against Tariff Tinkering in Last Session Hastened His End.

(From The Tribune Bureau.)

Washington, Oct. 17.—United States Senator Weldon Brinton Heyburn, of Idaho, died at his apartments here to-night after a lingering illness. He was sixty years old and had been in the Senate nine years.

The news of the death of Senator Heyburn was received with little surprise by his colleagues who are in Washington and others who are familiar with his condition and activities during the last session of Congress.

During the last few months of Congress Senator Heyburn was so indisposed, as a result of a lesion of the brain, that his physicians insistently urged that he give up his active duties, warning him that to continue his work would be at the risk of his life. Because of his almost abnormal sense of duty in public life, he only partly heeded the warning.

Senator Heyburn left the capital for a few weeks to recuperate, but returned shortly before the adjournment of Congress and plunged actively into his work again. He was almost constantly in his seat or walking about the Senate chamber, taking an earnest part in the debates on most of the important measures and exerting himself to the extreme. His condition was such that sometimes his colleagues feared that he would collapse in the midst of a speech, as he exerted himself far beyond his strength.

Particularly on the tariff question Senator Heyburn was energetic in his work, against the expostulations of his friends, insisting that it was his duty not to permit bills under consideration to pass without sending a warning of the danger that he believed would follow indiscriminate tariff tinkering. This fight he waged unflinchingly up to the close of Congress, and unquestionably it dissipated his strength and hastened his death.

Exhausted by Speechmaking.

Being a ready speaker and alert to oppose what he believed to be unsound legislation, Senator Heyburn held the floor much of the time during the last days of his conspicuous career in the Senate, thus exhausting himself physically by his speechmaking. His speeches to the last were characteristically forceful and full of the old-time vim that made him famous as a vigorous speaker. Some of his last efforts were tinged with pathos, as it was obvious that they were almost superhuman—coming from a man toiling with death.

A staunch protectionist, Senator Heyburn frankly classed himself as a "standpatter," and was proud of the distinction. In addition, he regarded himself as a statesman of the old school, for the practices of which he fought stoutly to the end, as against the so-called Progressive measures and theories.

Weldon Brinton Heyburn had been a striking figure in the United States Senate for the last nine years. He was the drafter of the pure food law, and more recently was the chief promoter of the bill to regulate cold storage. He held the unusual distinction of being chairman of two big committees—Manufactures and the Revision of the Laws of the United States.

Was a "Peppery Debater."

He was by temperament a fighter of the explosive type. His colleagues knew him as a "peppery" debater. When not debating he sat watchful in his front seat in the Senate, ready at the slightest provocation to strike a verbal blow at a fellow member, or with a word to silence the exuberance of an irreverent gagger. Nor were his fights verbal. He carried a gun during the Leadville strikes, and sent a good many men to the penitentiary for their conduct. In the Cour d'Alene riots, it is said that $1,500 was voted at that time as a reward for the man who would kill Heyburn on sight. The prospective assassin and victim met face to face, but the reward wasn't earned.

In February, 1910, he aroused much opposition by a fiery sectional speech in the Senate against a resolution authorizing the Secretary of War to lend certain tents, saddles and bridles for use at a Confederate reunion.

He was an active opponent of President Taft's reciprocity treaty and of the arbitration treaties. As chairman of the subcommittee charged with the investigation of the election of Senator Stephenson, in January of this year, he won general praise for his handling of the case. His work resulted in a unanimous report exonerating Senator Stephenson.

Came of Quaker Stock.

Senator Heyburn was born in 1852, in Delaware County, Penn., on the site of the battle of Brandywine. The Heyburns and Heyburns belong to the same family. The Senator's ancestors were English Quakers. Among his early relatives was James Heyburn, fourth Earl of Bothwell, husband of Mary Queen of Scots.

Young Heyburn received an academic education, was admitted to the bar in 1876 and practiced law from that time. In the winter of 1888-89 he moved to Shoshone County, Idaho, where he had kept his residence ever since. He was a member of the convention which framed the constitution of the State of Idaho and chairman of the judiciary committee in that body.

Mr. Heyburn always voted and supported the Republican ticket. He was a delegate to the Republican national convention of 1888, 1892, 1896 and 1904 and the national convention for Idaho from 1904 to 1908. He was the nominee of the Republican party of Idaho for Congress in 1895, but was defeated by a fusion of the Democrats, Populists and Silver Republicans. He was elected to the United States Senate on January 13, 1903, receiving the entire Republican vote of the Legislature, to succeed Henry Helfeld, Democrat, for the term beginning March 4, 1903, and was re-elected by the unanimous Republican vote of the Legislature on January 13, 1909.

GEORGE N. SOUTHWICK.

[By Telegraph to The Tribune.] Albany, Oct. 17.—George N. Southwick, an ex-representative in Congress, and for many years one of the leaders in Albany County politics, died suddenly to-night, from pneumonia, aged forty-nine years. Mr. Southwick was graduated from Williams College in 1884, and took up the study of law, but gave up law for a journalistic career. He was assistant editor on the old "Albany Morning Express," and was managing editor of "The Albany Evening Journal" from 1889 to 1896. He also served in the Legislature as correspondent for The Associated Press. Mr. Southwick was a member of Congress from the old 20th District and from the new 23d District, continuously from 1894 to 1909, with the exception of one term when he was defeated by Martin H. Glynn. Mr. Southwick was born in Albany in 1862. He had for years been a close friend and adviser of William Barnes, Jr., and was also an intimate friend of Vice-President Sherman. Mr. Southwick was a student of finances, and wrote extensively on that subject. He had large holdings in real estate in Washington and in mining property in Essex County. He never married. His mother, one brother and two sisters survive him.

MRS. MARY N. W. MORGAN.

[By Telegraph to The Tribune.] Philadelphia, Oct. 17.—Mrs. Mary Newbold Welsh Morgan, daughter of the late John Lower Welsh, and wife of F. Corlies Morgan, died last night at her home, in Chestnut Hill, after a long illness. Mrs. Morgan was prominent socially in New York, Newport and this city. In 1899 she married Percival Fraser, Jr., whom she divorced nine years later, and soon afterward married Mr. Morgan. Mrs. Morgan's grandfather, the late John Welsh, was a United States Minister to Great Britain.

BEDFORD FUNERAL TO-MORROW.

The funeral of Alfred Bedford, who died last week in London, England, will be held at the Emmanuel Baptist Church, Lafayette avenue and St. James's Place, Brooklyn, to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. The Rev. John Humpstone, D. D., assisted by the Rev. J. Lewis Conant, will conduct the services.

Alfred Bedford, a direct descendant of the Pemberton-Bedfords of Bedfordshire, England, was born in London in 1824. He came to America with his father when fourteen years of age, his first employment being with Tiffany, Young & Ellis. On attaining his majority he was taken into partnership, and with Mr. Tiffany, Mr. Cook and Colonel McClure constituted the original firm of Tiffany & Co. In 1852 Mr. Bedford accepted the London agency of the Waltham Watch Company, continuing as its representative abroad until his retirement from active business in 1903.

Church work claimed a large part of Mr. Bedford's attention, and he was deacon of the Washington Avenue Baptist Church, of Brooklyn, for many years. He afterward became a constituent member of the Emmanuel Baptist Church, and was on the original board of deacons. He held many offices in Baptist Church circles and was a great collector of old Bibles, having some rare books in his possession.

FUNERAL OF MAX SPICKER.

The funeral of Max Spicker, who died on Monday evening, took place yesterday forenoon at the Temple Emanuel-EI, of which he had been musical director for many years. There was a large attendance of musicians and members of the congregation.

The Rev. Joseph Silverman, rabbi of the Temple, pronounced a eulogy on the dead musician, and the Temple choir of three solo voices sang, with W. C. Macfarlane at the organ, he having come from Portland, Me., to pay tribute to his long-time associate.

CONTEST J. C. MARTIN WILL

Executors Would Give $750,000 to Presbyterian Bodies.

Jesse S. L'Amoreaux and Daniel E. Wing, executors of a will made by John Calvin Martin, March 19, 1908, filed a contest in the Surrogate's office yesterday against the will executed by Mr. Martin on July 31, 1912. Mr. Martin, who died on September 3 at Riverdale Sanitarium, where he had been committed as a mental incompetent, was a retired coal merchant, and left an estate valued at $1,000,000. In the will of 1908 the testator gave bequests to several public institutions and to his sisters and a brother, and created the Bible Training Department of the John C. Martin Foundation. The will of 1912, now disputed, gave about $750,000 of his estate to the John C. Martin Fund, which he established in 1904 to encourage Bible study, morality and Christian living.

Mr. L'Amoreaux and Mr. Wing, executors under the prior will, said in their affidavits in support of their contest of the subsequent will that it was not a valid instrument, because at the time it was executed the testator was mentally incompetent and, "in fact, was insane," and that the writing submitted for probate bearing the date of July 31, 1912, "was not his free and voluntary act, but, on information and belief, was obtained by undue influence exercised by some persons unknown to the contestants."

The friends of the John C. Martin Educational Fund held a meeting on September 21, and tentatively decided not to take any action to collect the large bequest left to the fund by its founder. The trustees are of the opinion that the purposes of the fund can be better carried out by the Presbyterian institutions mentioned by Mr. Martin in his will of 1908.

Every man who has not registered must bear his part of the disgrace that the registration so far is below that of four years ago. Wipe out your responsibility by registering to-day. Registration places are advertised in the papers. Hunt yours up and go to it on your way to work.

FOREIGN SAVANTS GUESTS

American Geographical Society Entertains in New Home.

The American Geographical Society, of New York, entertained fifty distinguished European geographers, who, having been travelling through this country, and other guests at an informal reception last night at the society's new building, 157th street and Broadway. The occasion combined the official housewarming of the organization with the entertainment of the travelers.

In the absence of Archer M. Huntington, president of the society, whose gifts were largely responsible for the erection of the new building, John Greenough, vice-president, acted as master of ceremonies.

The foreign geographers present included Dr. Eduard Bruckner, Dr. Fritz Machatschek and Dr. Eugen Oberhummer, of Austria; Paul Elsen, of Belgium; Professor Ole Olufsen, of Denmark; Henri Marguerite, of France; Emmanuel de Martonne, Lucien Gaillois, Antoine Vacher, Pierre Bastian, Jacques Goubert and Francois Herbet, of France; Dr. Erich von Drygalski, Dr. Fritz Jaeger, Dr. Gottfried Merzbacher, Dr. Joseph Partsch, Dr. Alfred Ruge, Dr. Carl Uhlig, Harry Waldbauer, Erich Wunz, Carl Gert, Dr. Gustav W. von Zahn, of Germany; Henry O. Dgville and W. H. Chisholm, Alan G. Ogilvie, Dr. Eugene de Myles, of Great Britain; Dr. Eugene de Myles, of Great Britain; Dr. Paul Teleki, of Hungary; Dr. Olinio Marinelli, Professor Hunyadi, Dr. Cesare Calciati, of Italy; J. F. Niemeyer and Dr. Karl Oestreich, of the Netherlands; Werner Wernskold, of Norway; Vladimir Doublansky and Jules de Schokalsky, of Russia; Dr. Gunnar Anderson, of Sweden, and Emilie Chaux, Dr. Fritz Nussbaum and Andre Chaux, of Switzerland.

A dinner in honor of the visitors will be given at the Waldorf-Astoria this evening.

CAPTAIN HODGINS DIES

Weakened Heart by Efforts to Obtain Reinstatement.

BINGHAM DISMISSED HIM

'Big Bill,' Whose Specialty Was Cleaning Up Districts, Got Back by Reducing Weight.

Captain William H. Hodgins, "Big Bill," who had been ill since July 26, died last night at his home, No. 145 East Tremont avenue, The Bronx, from heart disease. His wife and his five children were in attendance at his bedside when the end came for the big policeman.

Captain Hodgins, although attacked by heart disease on July 26, rallied afterward, and reported back for duty again at the Bronx Park station, his command. That was in August, but after serving for several weeks, he was again forced to take to his bed about three weeks ago.

"Big Bill" Hodgins' death is said to have been caused by his frantic efforts to regain his place in the Police Department after Commissioner Bingham had dismissed him from the force, in November, 1907. The Commissioner ruled that Hodgins was too stout to do active duty. Determined to show his capability as a policeman, he started in to train, and within a few weeks had rid himself of fifty-five pounds of excess flesh. He was successful in his fight for reinstatement, but the strain he had undergone in reducing his weight, weakened his heart.

In his police career he had established a reputation for cleaning up the Tenderloin and other districts. In 1906 he was stationed at the Peter De Lacy poolroom, and for that and other good service was sent by Commissioner McAdoo to the Mercer street command, which was regarded as a promotion.

In later years his career was full of excitement. On April 23, 1911, "Big Bill" nearly went to the Tombs for keeping two patrolmen on the premises of an alleged disorderly house, which he raided at No. 8 Mulberry street. The owner of the house objected to the presence of the policemen and got a summons for the police captain, charging oppression.

Captain Hodgins, in defending himself, said he was acting under Commissioner Crosey's orders. The magistrate told him he would have to go to trial in Special Sessions and committing papers were being drawn when word came that Crosey had ordered the men away.

Captain Hodgins had been on the force for twenty years.

HIPODROME BENEFIT

Wilson-Marshall League Testimonial to Include Long List of Players.

A mammoth testimonial will be given at the Hippodrome on Sunday evening, October 27, by members of the theatrical profession under the auspices of the Wilson and Marshall League.

The attempt has been made to arrange a programme as varied as possible in order that a well balanced entertainment may be given. Among the people and acts which will positively be seen on this occasion are: George M. Cohan, who will sing some of his original songs and will dance as only George M. Cohan can dance; William Collier, who will give a likeable imitation of himself; David Montgomery and Fred Stone, the rest of the theatrical world; Blossom Seeley and Rube Marquard, in their new vaudeville act; Arthur Pryor and his band; Montgomery and Moore in an act from "Hanky Panky"; Louise Dresser, Ward Vokes, famous the world over; Carter de Haven, the "Vest Pocket Bear Brummel"; Stuart Barnes, Laddie Cliff, Emma Carus, Victor Moore, Cliff Gordon, George Beban, the "Top of the World" Dancers, Charles J. Ross, Tom Nawn, the "Eight Dancing Madcaps" from "Tantamounting Tommy"; twenty-one "Famous Americaners" made up of twenty-one Hippodrome song writers, and all the Hippodrome feature acts—the Mazzetti Family, the Six Brackers, Harry Diers & Co., and the Turnbells.

In addition there will be short speeches by the Hon. William Sulzer, Democratic candidate for Governor of New York; Augustus Thomas, the playwright, and May Irwin, the comedienne. From the offices of the Wilson and Marshall League it is announced that there will be popular prices and that speculators will have no opportunity to sell tickets at exorbitant rates.

HILLIARD IN "ARGYLE CASE."

Atlantic City, Oct. 17.—Robert Hilliard, under the direction of Klaw & Erlanger, presented at Nixon's Apollo Theatre last night for the first time "The Argyle Case," an original four act drama by Harriet Ford and Henry J. O'Higgins, written in co-operation with Detective William J. Burns. The solution of the two crimes had been worked out by Detective Burns as he undertaken in his own agency. The story does not touch upon politics, graft or industrial conditions.

Mr. Hilliard plays Asche Kayton, a private investigator. The supporting cast includes Gustav von Seyffertitz, who staged the play; Alphonse Eklert, Joseph Tuohy, Louis Thomas, William H. Robert, N. J. Pierson, Frank Russell, James C. Malady, Bert Walter, John Beck, Selene Johnson, Stella Archer, Amy Lee, Agnes Everett, Elizabeth Byrne, Wanda Carlyle and a dozen others.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

On Friday of next week Jules Eckert Goodman's sex problem drama, "The Point of View," will be shown for the first time in New York as William A. Brady's offering for a series of matinees. There are to be given on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, October 28, 29 and 30, and Friday, November 1, the company, which has been "perfect" in its immediate assignment to begin, consists of William Morris, Howard Estlin, Lucille Watson, Madge Kennedy, Grace Griswold, May Malloy, Helen Campbell and others. Mr. Morris and Miss Kennedy are at present are playing in "Little Miss Brown" and Mr. Estlin in "Little Women."

Helen Ware's premier in Elmer Harris's new play, "Trial Marriage," will take place at the Academy of Music, Baltimore, on next Monday evening. After a week in that city she will come to New York, opening at the Hudson Theatre on Tuesday evening, October 28.

Joseph M. Gates will present at the Fulton Theatre, beginning October 30, "The Fight," a new play by Bayard Veiller, author of "Within the Law."

Julia Sanderson will make her debut as a star under the management of Charles Frohman at Philadelphia on January 17, when she will play Della Dale in "The Sunshiny."

"What Alls You" is the title of the new farce by Rupert Hughes, which Henry W. Savage has accepted for production in

BOHEMIANS ARE HOMELESS

Can't Understand Why Martin Beck Repented of Generosity.

The Bohemians, an organization composed of the leading musicians in New York, is in a quandary. It doesn't know whether or not it has a home, though until a short time ago it thought it had one on the top floor of Martin Beck's new Palace Theatre Building, at Broadway and 43d street.

According to Rubin Goldmark, vice-president of the club, Mr. Beck last spring made the club a present of a five-year lease of the upper floor of the building. Now he wishes his lease returned, as he finds he has other uses for the floor.

What the club's answer will be is not known, as it will do nothing until it has heard personally from Mr. Beck. "It is a most extraordinary situation," said Mr. Goldmark to a Tribune reporter last night. "Mr. Beck, who is a member of the Bohemians, presented us last spring with a lease of the top story of the Palace Theatre Building. We thought it very kind and generous of him, when suddenly, a few days ago, we received a letter from Mr. Beck's secretary saying that he wished the lease returned, as he had made other arrangements."

"The club's attitude has been a most dignified one. We have written to Mr. Beck personally, asking him to make clear his position, but as yet we have received no reply. We shall do nothing until we hear from him. What Mr. Beck's reason is for repenting of his generosity we don't know, but as I said, it has put affairs in an extraordinary position."

Franz Kneisel, president of the Bohemians, said that he could not discuss the matter until after a meeting of the club, on Saturday. It was stated at Mr. Beck's office that nothing there was known of the matter, the vaudeville manager being at present in San Francisco.

CAMPUS CONCERTS ARRANGED

Series of Six, from Oct. 29 to April 8, Will Present Many Artists.

The second season of the campus concert course at University Heights will begin on Tuesday evening, October 29, and will include six concerts, ending on Tuesday, April 8, 1913. This course, instituted with the intention of fostering a love of music and to create a genuinely musical atmosphere at University Heights, was founded last season. Its objects have been accomplished and a high standard of musical ideals has been established, if the encouragement received by the committee in making its plans for this year is any criterion.

Among those chosen for the concert course this season are Reinold Wernath, barytone, who will appear at the first concert, and Frank Bibb, pianist, at the second concert, on Tuesday evening, November 12; Miss Eleanor Poehler, mezzo-soprano, and the University Heights Choral Society, Reinold Wernath, conductor, at the third concert, on Tuesday evening, December 3; Miss Harriet Ware, composer-pianist, and John Barnes Wells, tenor, at the fourth concert, on Tuesday evening, February 25; Miss Florence Hinkle, soprano, and Maximilian Pizer, violinist, at the fifth concert, on Tuesday evening, March 18; and the University Heights Choral Society at the sixth concert, on Tuesday evening, April 8.

JILTED, WANTS $50,000

Mrs. Aragon Says A. J. McClure Broke Promise to Wed Her.

Archibald J. McClure, son of William McClure, a rich business man of Albany, was made the defendant in a $50,000 breach of promise suit yesterday, which Mrs. Helen Aragon filed in the Supreme Court. The defendant moves a great deal from place to place, and it was necessary for Mrs. Aragon to get an order to serve McClure by mailing the papers to the Laurel House, Lakewood, N. J., where he is now believed to be staying.

Mrs. Aragon says McClure made his first promise to marry her on April 6, 1910, and several times since then has repeated it. Now McClure refuses to make good his alleged promise. He is the divorced husband of Mrs. Anna Cassin McClure, daughter of John Cassin, of Rensselaer, for many years prominent in the politics of the county. The marriage of Miss Cassin and McClure came about through a picture of the young woman in a magazine.

McClure was travelling in the West at the time and he hurried to Albany to woo the original of the picture. He got there just ahead of an Italian count who was on the same mission. Miss Cassin and McClure were married six months after the first meeting. That was fourteen years ago. Mrs. McClure obtained her divorce in 1910, the court awarding her $5,000 a year alimony for herself and five-year-old son. Three months after Mrs. McClure was divorced she married Parker Corning, son of a former president of the New York Central Railroad.

This is the third day of registration. Booths open from 7 a. m. to 10 p. m. To-morrow is the last day, but don't take a chance. Register to-day. Do it this morning. Delay is fatal. Don't lose your vote. If you don't register you cannot vote.
